

Arizonans Speak Out About The Arts in 2018

An In-Depth Look at Perceptions and Attitudes About the Arts

Americans are highly engaged in the arts and believe more strongly than ever that the arts promote personal well-being, help us understand other cultures in our community, are essential to a well-rounded K-12 education, and that government has an important role in funding the arts.

Introduction

Americans Speak Out About The Arts in 2018 is the second in a series of national public opinion surveys about the arts (the first was conducted in 2015). The poll was conducted by Ipsos Public Affairs (the third largest survey research firm in the world) on behalf of Americans for the Arts during the week of May 9-16, 2018. To ensure precision in the findings, a sample of 3,023 adults were interviewed online (by way of comparison, the typical national political poll has a sample size of just 1,000 adults). Additionally, a sample made up of adults living in the following eight states (roughly 305 interviews completed per each state) was surveyed for state reports: Alaska, Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Maine, Montana, Nevada, and Tennessee. The accuracy of the national survey has a credibility interval of ± 2.0 percentage points and the state surveys ± 6.5 .

The arts are a fundamental component of a healthy society—one that provides benefits to the individual, community, and the nation:

- Aesthetic: The arts create beauty and preserve it as part of culture.
- Creativity: The arts encourage creativity, a critical skill in a dynamic world.
- Expression: Artistic work lets us communicate our interests and visions.
- Identity: Arts goods, services, and experiences help define our culture.
- Innovation: The arts are sources of new ideas, futures, concepts, and connections.
- Preservation: Arts and culture keep our collective memories intact.
- Prosperity: The arts create millions of jobs and enhance economic health.
- Skills: Arts aptitudes and techniques are needed in all sectors of society and work.
- Social Capital: We enjoy the arts together, across races, generations, and places.

Because of this significance of the arts to American life, there are many studies that document the social, educational, and economic impacts of the arts on communities. What makes this study different is that it measures from the public's perspective their (1) personal engagement in the arts as audience and creator, (2) support for arts education and government arts funding, (3) opinions on the personal and well-being benefits that come from engaging in the arts, and (4) how those personal benefits extend to the community.

Executive Summary of Findings

Arizonans Speak Out About the Arts in 2018

Arizonans believe the arts provide meaning to their lives and make their communities better places to live.

- 79 percent of Arizona adults attended an arts or cultural event during the previous year, such as the theater, museum, zoo, or a musical performance.
- People in Arizona are more likely to be personally involved in artistic activities as arts makers (63 percent) than American adults nationally (47 percent).
- Arizonans are especially likely to agree that the arts are a form of pure pleasure when they experience or participate in them (82 percent) and that they unify us, regardless of age, race, and ethnicity (81 percent).
- 80 percent of Arizonans believe the arts help students perform better academically. 70 percent believe that the arts improve healing and the healthcare experience. 54 percent agree that the arts are helpful to military personnel transitioning back to civilian life.
- Arizonans are especially likely to agree that creativity enhances success in the workplace (74 percent), compared to the national sample. Arizonans are also more likely to say their job requires them to be creative—either individually or as part of a team—and come up with ideas that are new or unique (63 percent).
- In Arizona, there is consensus when it comes how the arts impact tourism, with almost nine-in-ten adults in agreement that the arts attract travelers and are good for tourism (87 percent).
- Arizona residents stand out as being especially likely to agree that the arts have a social impact and improve the quality and livability of their community (79 percent vs. 71 percent nationally).

- Most adults in Arizona disapprove of the government eliminating the National Endowment for the Arts, including 50 percent who strongly disapprove.

Americans Speak Out About the Arts in 2018 (Highlights)

Nationally, Americans are highly engaged in the arts and believe more strongly than ever that the arts promote personal well-being, help us understand other cultures in our community, are essential to a well-rounded K-12 education, and that government has an important role in funding the arts.

1. “The arts provide meaning to our lives.” 69 percent of Americans believe the arts “lift me up beyond everyday experiences,” 73 percent feel the arts give them “pure pleasure to experience and participate in,” and 81 percent say the arts are a “positive experience in a troubled world.”
2. “The arts unify our communities.” The personal benefits of the arts extend beyond the individual to the community. 72 percent believe “the arts unify our communities regardless of age, race, and ethnicity” and 73 percent agree that the arts “helps me understand other cultures better.”
3. “Most of us seek out arts experiences.” Nearly three-quarters of the adult population (72 percent) attended an arts or cultural event during the previous year, such as the theater, museum, zoo, or a musical performance.
4. “We experience the arts in unexpected places.” Americans also enjoy the arts in "non-traditional" venues, such as a symphony in the park, a performance in an airport, or exhibitions in a hospital or shopping mall (70 percent).
5. “There is near universal support for arts education.” 91 percent agree that the arts are part of a well-rounded K-12 education. Over 90 percent say students should receive an education in the arts in elementary school, middle school, and high school. 89 percent say the arts should also be taught outside of the classroom in the community.

Americans Speak Out About the Arts in 2018 (Highlights)

6. “We support government arts funding at all levels.” Most Americans approve of arts funding by local government (60 percent), state government (58 percent), federal government (54 percent), and by the National Endowment for the Arts (64 percent).
7. “We will vote for candidates who increase arts funding.” 53 percent support increasing federal government spending on nonprofit arts organizations (vs. 22 percent against). Americans are twice as likely to vote for a candidate who increases federal arts spending from 45 cents to $1 per person than against one (37 percent vs. 18 percent).
8. “We make art in our personal time.” Half of all Americans are personally involved in art-making activities such as painting, singing in a choir, making crafts, writing poetry, or playing music (47 percent).
9. “Creativity boosts job success.” 55 percent of employed adults say their job requires them to “be creative and come up with ideas that are new and unique.” An even greater proportion (60 percent) say that the more creative and innovative they are at their job, the more successful they are in the workplace.
10. “Cultural institutions add value to our community.” Whether people engage with the arts or not, 90 percent believe cultural facilities (theaters, museums, sculpture parks, neighborhood arts centers) improve quality of life, and 86 percent believe cultural facilities are important to local business and the economy.
11. “We donate to the arts.” 24 percent of the population donated to an arts, culture, or public broadcasting organization in the previous year. Donors were typically younger and had higher incomes and education.
12. “Not everyone in my community has equal access to the arts.” Despite many benefits that the arts bring to individuals and communities, just 50 percent believe that “everyone in their community has equal access to the arts.”

Personal Engagement With The Arts

Arts and Culture Enjoyed by Arizonans in the Past Year

- 79 percent of Arizona adults attended an arts or cultural event during the previous year, such as the theater, museum, zoo, or a musical performance.

Methodology

- Americans Speak Out About The Arts in 2018 are the findings from an Ipsos poll conducted May 9-16, 2018 on behalf of Americans for the Arts. For the survey, a sample of 3,023 adults ages 18 and over from the continental U.S., Alaska and Hawaii was interviewed online, in English. The national sample was supplemented with a boost sample made up of adults living in the following eight states (roughly 305 interviews completed per each state): Alaska, Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Maine, Montana, Nevada, and Tennessee.
- The precision of Ipsos online polls is measured using a credibility interval. In this case, the poll has a credibility interval of ± 2.0 percentage points, and ± 6.5 percentage points for the state specific surveys.
- The sample for this study was randomly drawn from Ipsos's online panel, partner online panel sources, and "river" sampling and does not rely on a population frame in the traditional sense. Ipsos uses fixed sample targets, unique to each study, in drawing the sample. After a sample has been obtained from the Ipsos panel, Ipsos calibrates respondent characteristics to be representative of the U.S. Population using standard procedures such as raking-ratio adjustments. The source of these population targets is U.S. Census 2016 American Community Survey data. The sample drawn for this study reflects fixed sample targets on demographics. Post-hoc weights were made to the population characteristics on gender, age, region, race/ethnicity, and income.
- Statistical margins of error are not applicable to online nonprobability sampling polls. All sample surveys and polls may be subject to other sources of error, including, but not limited to coverage error and measurement error. Where figures do not sum to 100, this is due to the effects of rounding. Ipsos calculates a design effect (DEFF) for each study based on the variation of the weights, following the formula of Kish (1965). This study had a credibility interval adjusted for design effect of the following ($n=3,023$, $DEFF=1.5$, adjusted Confidence Interval=3.5 for all respondents surveyed).
